

Dear Eddies,

Applying for the post of our college's student librarian means to succeed Peter Moore who in my view already raised the standard to a very high level, keeping our library the tidied up and open space that invites students to work there. I, myself, as many of you might have noticed, spend my entire reading time in the library, somewhat subscribed to the desk right next to the staircase, piling up various art history books.

These books are from my department library because our very own college library does not have many books I can use for my course work and book requests typically end up in being made aware of the relative insignificance of my subject. While I understand that not every relevant book can be squeezed into the limited amount of shelves, I wished that at least the standard literature for every subject was available. Many of you have expressed similar views and I would like to take this as my main motivation to ask for your support in the election, and, perhaps, in making our library an even better place.

My experience includes

- student representative for my department library (coordinating procurement)
- voluntary work at the local library of my hometown

If elected, I will

- ensure that no subject is made insignificant
- collect feedback about your satisfaction with the library
- provide a platform for your concerns and suggestions
- discuss and evaluate ways to update and improve technical equipment
- do the house-keeping.

All the best (literally),
Alexander
